

Fostering Sustainability
in Human and Natural Systems

Fostering Sustainability In Human and Natural Systems

The mission of IRES is to foster sustainable futures through integrated research and learning about the linkages among human and natural systems to support decision making from local and global scales.

Director's Message

As Interim Director, I am extremely pleased to submit the annual report for the Institute for Resources, Environment and Sustainability at the University of British Columbia. This report covers two years, 2004 and 2005, given that time pressures and changes in staff made it impossible to submit an annual report last year.

This annual report is our first in the "new era" of IRES. One aspect of what is new is the wonderful Aquatic Ecosystems Research Laboratory (AERL) building, the new home of IRES and the Fisheries Centre. AERL provides us with a commodious, attractive, and collegial home for our Institute. A second new aspect is the change in faculty members and leadership at IRES. As many know, Les Lavkulich built the RMES graduate program from its inception over 25 years ago, and also built the Institute when opportunities arose over the last decade. Les retired from his position as Director and Professor in summer, 2004. Les's retirement left a major hole in our hearts and also in the leadership of the Institute. We all thank Les for the energy, mentorship, vision, and tireless service that he provided for so many years as Director. Ken Hall also reached the age at which faculty members must retire in winter, 2005. The departure of Les, followed 18 months later by Ken, marked a change in the faces, specializations and perspectives of the Institute. Yet these departures also have led to positive changes as well. Kai Chan joined IRES as a new Assistant Professor in fall, 2005. We welcome Kai to our organization and look forward to his insights, ideas, enthusiasm and bright spirit as part of IRES for many years. A third dimension has been an entire change in the staff of IRES. We were extraordinarily lucky to attract Kathryn Lewis to join us as Administrative Manager in IRES late in 2004. Kathryn then used her superb human resources skills to select a whole new administrative "dream team", with Lisa Belanger as Graduate Program Coordinator and Roberta Nouari as Financial Assistant for IRES.

Some IRES faculty members

Michael Healey provided important leadership for IRES in the second half of 2004 as Interim Director. During Mike's time as Director, the renewal of people and policies within IRES began on a highly successful track. Everyone in IRES thanks Mike for his contributions to IRES as Director, and then subsequently as Associate Director and mentor for the faculty who had less involvement with IRES in the past (particularly me).

I was happy to be invited to serve as Director beginning in 2005, but also mindful of the responsibility of trying to renew the efforts that were successful for RMES and IRES over many years. Since that time, the faculty and staff have devoted much time to revitalizing governance, management of the graduate program, and strategic planning within IRES. We have developed new approaches to managing information for graduate student programs, budgets, faculty associates and adjuncts and countless other administrative activities within the Institute. We have also spent considerable effort in searching for a new permanent Director, a topic to be addressed in the next annual report.

For me, the most satisfying aspects of being the Interim Director of IRES are:

- working with the brilliant, stimulating and creative students;
- working with the brilliant, stimulating and creative faculty;
- working with a motivated and professional staff that addresses all our needs before they become problems; and
- helping to move the Institute forward to help achieve its vision

Now I have a better understanding of why people feel that faculty members in this Institute are truly lucky.

Tim McDaniels

Highlights of 2004-2005

---

These have been years of large scale changes and successes at IRES. As already mentioned, we bid a happy retirement to Dr. Les Lavkulich, long time Director of IRES. In recognition of the services rendered by Dr. Lavkulich to both IRES and the University, a scholarship was established in his name, the Les Lavkulich Scholarship, which will be awarded annually to an outstanding RMES student.

Dr. Lavkulich's retirement led to the move of the C-CAIRN project from IRES to Anthropology and Sociology, under the leadership of Dr. Ralph Matthews.

In September of 2004, Dr. John Robinson received funding for his CFI project "Centre for Interactive Research on Sustainability" (CIRS), to build a new building focused on sustainable building techniques and initiative on the joint Great Northern Way Campus in Vancouver. The total value of the building will be approximately $30 million dollars.

We had significant staff changes in 2004 as well, with most of the administrative team leaving to pursue other opportunities. Kara Ko went on maternity leave; Kathryn Lewis was hired as the Administrative Manager; Lisa Belanger was hired as the Graduate Program Coordinator and Roberta Nouari joined IRES as the Financial Assistant.

IRES continued to be successful in recruiting students. Our program enrolled 23 new students in 2004, which included 15 Master's and 8 PhD students.

In 2005, IRES consolidated from 3 campus locations into our new home, the CFI/BCKDF funded Aquatic Ecosystems Research Laboratory or AERL. Located on Main Mall, in the center of the UBC campus. We are very happy to have space for students and faculty to work together and build a community of leading-edge research.

In July, Dr. Terre Satterfield was promoted to Associate Professor and granted tenure and Dr. Scott Hinch was promoted to the rank of Professor. We also welcomed Dr. Kai Chan, as our newest Assistant Professor. Dr. Chan's research area is within the ecological and evolutionary underpinnings of invasions and infestations, and conservation planning for ecosystem services.

In September, Dr. Michael Healey left IRES for Japan to take up the prestigious Visiting Professorship in Canada Studies, Kwansai Gakuin University, Nishinomiya, Japan. In December we bid another faculty member, Dr. Ken Hall a fond happy retirement.

In 2005, IRES continued its success in recruiting outstanding new students with 20 students (10 Masters and PhD students) joining our program.

Research at IRES

IRES faculty and their collaborators approach their research from within the paradigms of trans-disciplinarity. By fostering sustainable futures through integrated research and learning about the linkages among human and natural systems to support decision making from local to global scales, the researchers at IRES focus on addressing real problems and developing feasible solutions that are relevant for private and public policy. The research is based on strong theoretical and analytical frameworks and is structured to address relationships among humans and their natural and built environments, within a context of ecological integrity, human well-being and sustainability.

Core Values

Within this mission statement is embedded a set of core values that should guide IRES activities and strategies in broad terms.

These core values include:

- Policy Relevance
- Integrated Learning
- Linkages With Civil Society
- Trans-Disciplinarity
- Linkages Among Human and Natural Systems

Faculty and students at IRES cover the breadth of resource management and sustainability issues with their research. We have identified domains of focus that accentuate our strengths. Due to the nature of our research, these are not stand alone areas of research, cross over in focus and research questions are valued and explored. Please refer to our listings of research grants and publications for detailed examples of current research undertakings. Our areas of focus are:

Water, Ecosystems and Communities

- Watersheds
- Water
- Fisheries
- Ecosystems and Ecosystem Services

Energy, Technology, Health and Society

- Energy
- Health and The Environment
- Society, Science and Technological Change
- Complex Adaptive Systems

Local & Global Environmental Change

- Climate Change
- Extreme Events and Natural Hazards

- Participatory Process and Civil Society
- Risk, Decision Making, and Governance
- Risk and Culture
- Business and Sustainability

International Internship Program

Adam Perry, 2005 Intern hard at work

Since 1998 the IRES International Internship Program has been sending young Canadian university graduates overseas. With placements in most of the developing areas of the world over this time, we have established a network of partner NGO and host organizations with a focus on sustainable futures. Funded by the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA), our seven internship placements in 2005-2006 were in Africa, South America and India. In 2004-2005 we had three domestic interns funded by Science Horizons through Environment Canada and 7 international interns funded by CIDA. These placements were also in Africa, South America and India.

In 2005 we established a partnership with the Canadian Water Network to develop an internship program that undertakes to provide recent graduates with exposure to research beyond their degrees in water resource management both within Canada and internationally.

Over the coming decades, society faces a profound challenge and responsibility to transition toward sustainable living and to ensure a liveable world for future generations. IRES interns personify IRES' commitment to global citizenship on a local scale by providing opportunities and experiences to influence change in developing countries. Young Canadians bring enthusiasm, knowledge, and practice the Canadian philosophy of peace, order and good governance. With a subject focus upon water resource management, community education regarding sustainable farming, living and building practices, and the sharing of local knowledge and culture with Canadians to bring back to Canada, the IRES International Internship program recruits Canadian university graduates with a commitment and enthusiasm to be a global citizen.

Adaptations & Impacts Research Division

The Adaptation and Impacts Research Division (AIRD) of Environment Canada is committed to helping Canadians become well-adapted to current and future changes in the atmosphere. As part of its national program, AIRD established a Memorandum of Understanding with the University of British Columbia's Sustainable Development Research Institute (SDRI) in 1995 to conduct collaborative scientific research projects to expand understanding of climate change impacts and adaptation, and linkages with sustainable development. After the merger between SDRI and IRES, AIRD staff has continued to work with UBC faculty in IRES and other research units to pursue interdisciplinary research efforts in a variety of areas. Since 1995, AIRD has initiated several projects, obtaining grants for its UBC-based activities totaling $1.3 million, providing support for 14 graduate students and post-doctoral fellows. AIRD staff serves on advisory committees for 5 current graduate students, and have been on 8 committees for students who have successfully completed their studies. AIRD staff based at IRES and their research activities are listed below:

Dr. Stewart Cohen, AIRD Senior Researcher: Dr. Cohen has nearly 25 years of research experience in climate change impacts and adaptation, and has organized case studies throughout Canada. Since 1997, he has initiated a series of collaborative studies on climate change and water management in the Okanagan, and has contributed to the agri-environmental standards study coordinated by Tina Neale (AIRD). He is participating in a 2-year study on climate change visualization, led by Prof. Stephen Sheppard (Forestry), and is also initiating an exploratory effort on linking climate change adaptation, mitigation, and sustainable development with Prof. John Robinson (IRES), Dr. Livia Bizikova (AIRD) and many others. He has been a contributor to various reports of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) and is a lead author for the ongoing IPCC 4th Assessment. Besides his role within AIRD, he is also an Adjunct Professor with IRES, and teaches a graduate course on climate change.

Dr. Yongyuan Yin, AIRD Researcher: Dr. Yongyuan Yin is an environmental scientist with AIRD and an adjunct faculty member of IRES. Educated both in China and Canada, he has research experience and contacts in both countries and has been providing bridge functions to link research and exchange activities of the two countries. His research interests cover climate change impacts and adaptation, sustainability evaluation, environmental and resource management, land use and planning, and decision support systems. He designed and applied integrated assessment (IA) methods to study the impacts of climate change and adaptation in the Georgia Basin and Mackenzie River Basin of Canada, and many regions in China. Dr. Yin is the PI of the AIACC AS25 project funded by UNEP/GEF to study climate vulnerability and adaptation in Western China. He is also leading the impacts and adaptation component of a CIDA project on carbon sequestration in China.

Dr. Livia Bizikova, AIRD Post-Doctoral Fellow: Dr. Bizikova's work focuses on a new AIRD-IRES initiative examining linkages between climate change adaptation, mitigation and sustainable development (AMSD). She is the principle organizer of an international workshop bringing scientists and practitioners together to examine AMSD linkages. Her PhD. thesis is on socio-economic impacts of land-use change and linkages with climate change in transition countries. In 2001, she participated in the Young Scientists Summer Program at IIASA (Austria) and had a fellowship in Malardalen University (Sweden). From 2003 to 2005, she worked on the international project IDARI addressing rural development and linkages with climate change.

Robin Bing Rong, AIRD Researcher: Mr. Bing Rong has been the coordinator for the Canada-China Cooperation in Climate Change (C5) project for the past 4 years and focused on assessing the vulnerability to climate change on agriculture. He has over 8 years experience in application of GIS in support of environmental planning and management.

Tina Neale, AIRD Research Coordinator. Ms. Tina Neale's research interests include "mainstreaming" climate change, particularly in the area of resource management and planning. She is actively involved in AIRD's ongoing research examining the impacts of climate change on water resources in the Okanagan Basin, and has recently completed a master thesis focusing on the impacts of climate change, population growth and demand side management on future urban water demands. She is also coordinating AIRD's national research efforts on agri-environmental standards for water availability and is involved in organizing the international workshop on AMSD linkages.
